Cognitopathology

With the definition of the sociopathology as the study of objectification, we would want to define a cognitopathology as the study of rationalization.

The principal feature of the cognitopathology would be the processes of actualization and realization. A cognitive strategy might not afford practical actualization. Features of actuality may be praised, accepted, ignored, rejected, or condemned. We like to believe that everyone knows who the President of the United States is, and we know that it is not universally true that everyone knows who the President of the United States is.

A cognitive strategy of awareness implies practical processing of actuality as intake and reality as production. One might not prioritize the cognitive I/O processes as important. One might not conceive of cognitive I/O processes. One might conceive of body as entirely automated, or one might not conceive of body as metaphysically independent.
