A logical existential experientialism

If the universe of each individual is subjective, the objective is discerned by will of spirit and the logic of representational reason. The acuity of awareness has physio- experiential and logico- conceptual aspects. The logico- existential conception of awareness as objective serves individual development while ignoring or delaying the recognition of physio- experiential awareness. In the experiential frame of reference, an existential morality typically confronts subsistential morality on occasion. To recognize intent one may perform a familiar interpretation. The mountains of will and representation are scaled many times daily.

These transformations of that perceptual frustrum include the complexity of the physio- cognitive system of consciousness, and the complexity of the cognito- moral system of psychology. These two major state systems evolve spiritually and experientially. The handling of self is spiritual, and the universal immersion is experiential.

Once the subjective is distinct from the objective in conception and experience, and the characterization envelops spirit and intellect, the ancient supremacisms of the scholarly disciplines gives way to the nature of self and being. And the individual instrument is divorced from the ancient supremacisms of artificial economic wealth.
