Horizons and frontiers of humanity

The fear of inhumanity is familiar and common to many people. Presence is dominated by issues of insecurity. Interactions are dominated by issues of violence. These situations arise from, and are perpetuated by metaphysical poverty.

The error of inhumanity is irrational. By behaving poorly one demonstrates inferiority. That conflict has priority over interaction. Possible future relationships are discarded. Individual metaphysical power is annihilated.

There are many humanist traditions that guide children and adults away from or out of self destruction. Theological, familial, social, and educational traditions emphasize metaphysical wealth and wellbeing. Social independence. Economic interdependence. Humor. Kindness. Generosity.

Perhaps it is generosity of spirit that recommends abandoning sources and causes of illbeing. Metaphysical wealth is available at the cost of abandoning attachment to metaphysical poverty.
