

a logical psychological observatory

The observation of awareness versus resistance to awareness or relatively hostile anti-awareness is an observation of wellbeing versus illbeing. The differentiation of self and other is taught to children entering social situations as a developmental necessity.

The awareness of self has developed with a sense of social membership. That relationships serve a mutual benefit. That presence, communication, interaction, or contact are not relationship initiators. That other is like self. That person is the presence of self.

The anti-awareness is camouflage to the absence of open horizons of communication. Relatively healthy avoidance of the unknown is cautious conversation. Hostility and aggression mask a virtual conversational disability. An issue of literacy, or the awareness of inawareness or anti-awareness.
